""Miriam's Special Passover Surprise""

"Once upon a time, there was a little girl named Miriam. Miriam lived in a warm, cozy house filled with love and laughter. Miriam's family was Jewish, and every year they celebrated Passover. Passover was a very special holiday for them because it reminded them of their history and their traditions.

One of Miriam's favorite parts of the celebration was the Seder. The Seder was a special dinner where they read stories, sing songs, and eat symbolic foods. They had a beautiful Seder plate that held all the special foods, each with its own meaning.

But what Miriam loved most about the Seder was the tradition of finding the Afikoman. The Afikoman was a piece of matzah that was hidden somewhere in the house, and the children would search for it. The one who found it would get a special prize!

Miriam's father would always be the one to hide the Afikoman, and he was very good at it. He would find the trickiest spot, and no matter how hard they searched, it would take them a long time to find it. But this year, Miriam was determined.

As the Seder started, Miriam couldn't concentrate on the prayers or the songs. All she could think about was where the Afikoman could be hidden. She looked under the table, behind the books on the shelf, even in the flower vase!

After a lot of searching and thinking, Miriam finally had an idea. She remembered that her father loved to hide things in unusual places. So she looked for the Afikoman where she least expected it – inside a storybook!

Sure enough, when she opened one of her favorite storybooks, there was the hidden Afikoman! Miriam was ecstatic! She had found the Afikoman!

Everyone cheered, and her father gave her a big hug. Miriam felt proud of herself and happy that her determination had paid off. Finding the Afikoman was not just about the prize; it was about the joy of the challenge and the celebration of their traditions and family togetherness.

And so, Miriam's family celebrated another wonderful Passover Seder, filled with love, laughter, stories, songs, and the joy of being together as a family."
